A long cold winter coupled with watchful neighbours may be the reason why animal protection agencies in Saskatchewan are seeing significant increases of animal cruelty cases in 2013.

"We were running pretty steady with worries of frostbite and animals of inadequate shelter," said Saskatoon animal protection officer Stacey Greke.

The Saskatoon SPCA reports an 86 per cent increase in the number of cruelty cases during the combined months of January and February from 2012 to 2013.

The Regina Humane Society reports a 13 per cent increase for the first three months of 2013, when compared to the same time period in the previous year.

"Because the temperatures were cold for so long ... when the temperature is -38 C or -40 C suddenly (people) are concerned because it's so much colder out, and what was maybe adequate last year didn't seem as adequate this year," said Greke.

Don Simons, director of communications for the Regina Humane Society, said while the long winter is a contributing factor to the sharp increase in cruelty cases, the key is generally more people are concerned about animal welfare and know to report problems.

"I think a large part of it is that we work very hard on the education of the public.... People are more likely now to call about a dog that they see left out in the cold," said Simons.

Province poised to prosper through Manitoba tax hike

Steve McLellan, CEO of the Saskatchewan Chamber of Commerce, says Manitoba's PST increase will probably prompt an exodus of some Manitobans to Saskatchewan. ALYSSA McDONALD/METRO

Setting up shop in Saskatchewan.

Difference of three per cent in PST will likely prompt move west, business and tax experts say

ROSS ROMANIUK

ross.romaniuk@metronews.ca

One province's tax-related loss, it appears, is another province's gain. And already-booming Saskatchewan stands to prosper much further because of Manitoba's new hike of its PST.

The increase of Manitoba's provincial sales tax to eight per cent from seven per cent, to take effect this summer after it was announced in Winnipeg last week, makes Saskatchewan a far more greener pasture for residents and businesses in that neighbouring jurisdiction who are becoming fed up with the levy load.

That's the opinion of the Canadian Taxpayers Federation (CTF) and business leaders who say Saskatchewan's

Quoted

"The Winnipeg Jets can only carry the mood of the province for so long before they realize your government spending is out of control."

Email from fed-up Manitoban to Manitoba's premier five per cent PST will entice many Manitobans to look westward to prosper, or even to keep their financial heads above water.

"What it will probably do, more than anything, is send people our way who just say, 'Forget it, we've had enough — we're moving our business,'" Steve McLellan, CEO of the Saskatchewan Chamber of Commerce, said on Tuesday in Regina.

"It will be based on frustration, versus simply the economics."

McLellan noted that though a PST alone might not prompt a family or firm to pull up stakes, it's "certainly part of the mix" that can convince someone to cross a provincial boundary.

Colin Craig, Prairie region director for the CTF, said the decision by Manitoba Premier Greg Selinger's government to raise the sales tax — a budget move expected to generate an additional $277 million for that province in the next year — is "great news" for Saskatchewan.

Craig has been forwarded an email sent to Selinger by one fed-up Manitoban.

"Thanks for making it easier to accept a job relocation to Saskatoon," the taxpayer, whom Craig doesn't identify, says in the email.

"The Winnipeg Jets can only carry the mood of the province for so long before they realize your government spending is out of control."

Craig echoed that frustration, saying Saskatchewan will "get a lot of talented Manitobans moving there and investing in that province," and even simply shopping there when possible.

"That's quite significant. People will be frustrated," McLellan said of the tax hike on Manitobans.

"And if they come to Saskatchewan, it will be a great decision."

Awards celebrate Regina arts community

The ninth annual Mayor's Arts and Business Awards were held at Conexus Arts Centre at noon on Tuesday, recognizing Regina's artistic and creative talents, as well as corporate sponsors of what they do.

"Regina is such a great place," said community radio personality Jeff "Redbeard" Corbett, who won an award for support of the arts as a volunteer. "And because there isn't always the best weather, it is important to get out and do things, find plays to watch and musicians to see and engage the community ... it's great to be able to support the people that enhance my life."

The event was hosted by Mayor Michael Fougere and CTV personality Carey Smith. Between awards, the audience was treated to performances and presentations from some of the nominees, including musicians Belle Plaine and Kieffer McLean.

"This is the city of Regina, along with the business and arts community, coming together to recognize emerging artists, visual artists, all sorts of artists from around the city," Fougere told the audience of about 125. "It's a chance to say we are thankful of what we have in our city, because it is what makes us unique and special."

Winners included artist and dancer Jacob Pratt with the emerging artist award, and filmmaker Chrystene Ells for innovation in the arts. Writer Sandra Birdsell was honoured with a lifetime achievement award.

Patrol officers get greater powers

Saskatchewan's highway patrol officers now have the power to issue speeding tickets.

Highways Minister Don McMorris says the officers will set up in work zones across the province and will issue speeding tickets to any driver exceeding 60 kilometres per hour.

Highway transport patrol officers are considered special constables with the authority to enforce federal, provincial and municipal statutes relating to road transportation and the licensing, registration and operation of vehicles.

The province has implemented new signage and new safety devices such as rumble strips as well as deterrents in the form of increased fines.

Last summer's death of 18-year-old Ashley Richards, a flag person working on a road construction site near Midale, sparked the changes.

Juno Awards a multimillion-dollar boon for city: Mayor

Let the good times roll.

Fougere says the biggest impact is the exposure Regina has received

JEFF
jeff.mackey@metronews.ca

While many Juno Award winners may have packed up from Regina and gone home, Mayor Michael Fougere says the biggest winner is the city itself.

"We have a general understanding that (the Junos) will be about a $10-million impact on the overall economy over the four days they were here," Fougere said on Tuesday.

"This is based on what we know happened in Saskatoon a few years ago, and adding a bit of inflation to that.

"When people come here they spend money, and you can just imagine all the things they do," Fougere

Projected impact

$10M

Mayor Michael Fougere believes the Juno Awards will have a $10-million impact on the city's economy.

The party won't stop

"We have experts who are going out identifying and getting major acts and events for our city, so we expect this will continue to happen in the future."

Mayor Michael Fougere

added. "They stay at a hotel, they travel around, they are buying gas and meals and all those things add up to bumping the economy."

A thorough account of the impact is still in the works, but the mayor is only positive about how the main events went this past weekend.

"There is a significant impact on the economy in terms of economic development," Fougere said, "but what is more important is the exposure the city has — that's free advertising that you can't purchase."

With a Paul McCartney concert planned for this summer and the Grey Cup coming in November, it's proving to be a banner year for Regina's event-hosting, and Fougere couldn't be happier about it.

"This is a great year for us and it just keeps getting better," said Fougere.

Al-Qaida in Iran to blame? Two charged over alleged plan to hit passenger train appear in court

Two men charged in an alleged al-Qaida-supported terror plot to attack a VIA Rail passenger train disputed the allegations against them Tuesday as they made their first appearances in court.

Raed Jaser, 35, and Chiheb Esseghaier, 30, are facing several terrorism charges each in what the RCMP is calling the first known alleged plot in Canada directed by the terrorist organization.

Esseghaier, who appeared in court in Montreal, stood calmly in the witness box and asked to address the court.

"The conclusions were made based on acts and words which are only appearances," he said.

Both Esseghaier and Jaser are charged with conspiracy to murder for the benefit of a terrorist group, participatpating in a terrorist group.

If convicted, they could be sentenced to life in prison.

Several family members attended Jaser's brief Toronto court appearance.

"Of course I am supporting my son, of course," said his father, Mohammed Jaser, as about two dozen journalists surrounded him. "Let the police do their job."

Jaser and Esseghaier were charged Monday in an alleged plot that the RCMP said involved "direction and guidance" from al-Qaida in Iran.

Rehtaeh Parsons' family met with Prime Minister Stephen Harper privately Tuesday to discuss changes to the Criminal Code in the wake of their daughter's death.

Rehtaeh's family alleges she was sexually assaulted at a party and images of the 15-year-old were transmitted online.

She attempted to hang herself and was taken off life support days later.

Boston bombing. Jihad websites held deadly allure for suspects: Officials

The dead Boston bombing suspect, Tamerlan Tsarnaev, was an ardent reader of jihadist websites and extremist propaganda, U.S. officials said Tuesday.

And evidence suggests he and his wounded brother, Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, were both motivated by an anti-American, radical version of Islam, the officials said.

Officials said Tamerlan, 26, frequently looked at extremist sites, including Inspire magazine, an English-language online publication produced by al-Qaida's Yemen affiliate. The magazine has endorsed lone-wolf terror attacks.

Meanwhile, 19-year-old Dzhokhar — suffering from a gunshot wound to the throat — was questioned in hospital by investigators, who let him write down his replies.

Foreign workers program is meant for high-skilled positions, Carney says

Last hurrah. At his final appearance before the finance committee, BoC governor tackles variety of sensitive subjects

Bank of Canada governor Mark Carney says the controversial temporary foreign workers program should not be used to drive wages down or to fill lower-skilled jobs.

Speaking to the Commons finance committee for the last time before his departure for London in June, Carney said the intent of the program is that it be used primarily to fill needs for high-skilled jobs temporarily, until businesses can train Canadians to take over.

The challenge of a skills shortage is not unique to Canada, Carney said, but the solution is training — not bringing in temporary foreign workers. Contrary to some views, he added, Canada's labour market is among the most flexible in terms of mobility among industrialized countries.

Outgoing CEO says Rogers needs to 'significantly' up customer service

Rogers Communications says it plans to launch a loyalty rewards program this year, as part of a bid to improve its relationship with customers.

Outgoing CEO Nadir Mohamed said Tuesday the wireless, cable and media company needs to improve its customer service "significantly."

We "will actually further work to reinforce this idea that we value our customers (and) we reward our customers for staying with us," he told reporters in Toronto, before the company's annual meeting.

Some longtime customers have turned to the customer-service department to request discounts on their payments. They want the company to demonstrate that the company "values their tenure," he said.

While details of the rewards program weren't revealed, a broad range of the telecom company's services will be recognized in the program. It will also extend to its banking and credit-card services, which are expected to launch sometime this year.

The volume of parcel delivery is expected to buck the trend and grow by 26 per cent due to online shopping, but the Conference Board says it won't be enough to offset the revenue lost in other areas.

SO YOU WANT TO BE A MARTIAN

If you're having a bad day here on Earth, consider the alternative.

How about a bad day on Mars?

Applications are now open for people who want to be the first settlers on Mars.

It may sound like science fiction, but Mars One, the company offering the gig, swears they'll have you there by 2023, which is only a decade away.

But there's a catch.

Mars One has the technology to get you there, but the technology to get you home doesn't exist.

It's like that Eagles anthem, Hotel California. "You can check out any time you like, but you can never leave."

So it's a one-way ticket to the Red Planet.

I don't know about you, but I've always wanted to go to Mars. I'm just not sure I want to be stuck there.

At first blush, it sounds romantic, but sometime around year four, you might want to order in pizza or hit the clubs, and whaddaya know? No pizza parlours. No clubs.

JUST SAYIN'

Paul Sullivan

Just more of that astronaut food that tastes like Tang and dog biscuits.

Therefore, Mars One is looking for a special kind of person.

Someone who is nuts enough to spend the rest of his or her life stuck in a climate-controlled hut the size of a portable toilet but well-adjusted enough not to try to eat his or her fellow castaways.

If you're that kind of person, Mars One is for you.

All you need to do is convince the Mars One people that you're the best nutbar of all the nutbars applying for the nutbar job, plus you've got the $33 registration fee. Deadline is Aug. 31, 2013.

Before you sign up, you should know that the average temperature on Mars is -55 C.

That will give applicants from Siberia and Canada the inside track. If you're from Novosibirsk or Winnipeg, it will feel just like home.

Other than thicker than normal heads or blood, applicants require no special skills, as they will spend seven years training and getting ready.

So, as you'd expect, the gallery of geeks featured on the Mars One website are all cut from the same cloth: basement-dwellers with bad facial hair. And that includes the women, with the clear exception of Ilona, 23, from Finland. You could almost imagine spending the next 63 years in a hermetically sealed bin with Ilona, who says she wants to devote herself to the good of mankind and enjoys the humour that comes from well-crafted subtlety.

Such as the prospect of being stuck on Mars with Jason, 24, from the U.S., who has an associate degree in welding and aspires to a bachelor's degree in welding engineering, for the rest of her life.

Somehow I think all this is going to end in tears. Too bad that on Mars, no one can hear you scream.

RE: How The World Will Change In 2043: We'll Turn Into Bots And Upload Our Memory, published April 22

I think those futurists are a bit looney and need to be taken back to the lunatic asylum for their meds. I'm sorry I might work in IT but I prefer keeping the hardware outside of my flesh.

Uploading our memories to the Internet in a cloud-based system would be a bad idea. Would you want a hacker to be able to hack into your brain directly? As for people switching limbs out for robotic limbs, I don't see that happening. If I hold hands with a girl I want it to be her physical hand not a metal plastic monstrosity unless she was in some sort of accident.

Wow, good job, Elizabeth Shaw, for your very pessimistic view about new technologies.

Evolution: No, we won't stop evolving even though we take drugs to be 'smarter'. Supplements/drugs, when taken responsibly, enhance our ability to get the things that our bodies need that we can't get from raw foods in small amounts. So what if foods are engineered? As long as the engineering of the food benefits our bodies' needs, it should be looked at as a great feat that we accomplished, not degraded by pessimism.

"Sure, I'll grant that 'AI will put us out of work.' But isn't this the ultimate goal of AI creation, to relieve us humans from doing repetitive jobs, sometimes complex jobs, to minimize errors and free us from hard labour?"

Yes, there's a lot of things to be concerned about at the moment such as chemical wastes, etc. But the genetic engineering of foods leads to better crops (size and vitamins), e.g. bananas.

AI workers: Sure, I'll grant that "AI will put us out of work." But isn't this the ultimate goal of AI creation, to relieve us humans from doing repetitive jobs, sometimes complex jobs, to minimize errors and free us from hard labour? Yes, sure, you'll lose what you hold so dear (money) to get by everyday, but these AI workers will free us to do more things than doing repetitive work, such as more time with families, friends ... more time to socialize, more time to learn and experiment, study science, more time to think and work on more important things.

Implanted Technology: Yes, I don't like technology implanted in my body. Except, if it'll help me improve my life and help prolong it, by probably having a chip that'll monitor my blood pressure, sodium intake, etc.

The American dream, plus a lap dance or two

If anyone is living the American dream, it's Bar Paly. In the last few years, the Israeli actress and model has been landing increasingly bigger roles in TV and film, including parts in How I Met Your Mother and The Starter Wife, and in the film A Glimpse Inside the Mind of Charles Swan III.

So it seems fitting that her biggest project to date is a dark riff on the American dream. Pain & Gain is a true crime story about a group of bodybuilders (dubbed the Sun Gym Gang) doing bad things in mid 1990s Miami.

According to Paly, the story shows what happens when people try to skip hard work in pursuit of fortune.

"The moral of the story in the end is that greed is bad. There are no shortcuts (to success)," she says.

In the film, Paly plays a stripper with big ambitions of becoming a Hollywood star, and she admits it was intimidating walking onto a set with a list of big names.

"It was so overwhelming," she says. "First off, it's a Michael Bay set, and I know to him it's a small budget film, but it's the biggest thing I've ever done. And on top of that you have to act against Mark Wahlberg. I was trying to pretend that everything is cool, but inside I was screaming 'I'm reading lines with Wahlberg.'"

She credits Bay for putting her at ease by first shooting scenes where she didn't have to talk.

"In the first few days he gave me the scenes where I didn't have to actually talk too much, it was more the lap dance and sex scenes," she says, laughing. "It was like, 'Hi, nice to meet you Mark Wahlberg, now here's my hair in your face while I give you a lap dance.'"

Nuptials often turn nasty going down theatre aisles

The Big Wedding. The latest big screen effort is just one in a long line of movies where hilarity and horror dominate the story

Famous quotes

The famous wedding scene in The Godfather — including the much-quoted Luca Brasi line, "Don Corleone, I am honoured and grateful that you have invited me to your home on the wedding day of your daughter. And may their first child be a masculine child," — featured many Staten Island Italian-Americans as extras.

They were invited to the set to enjoy homemade wine, traditional Italian food and enjoy themselves as though it were a real wedding.

Inspiration for the film

Four Weddings and a Funeral came when writer Richard Curtis realized he had been to 72 weddings in 10 years.

The movie, about a confirmed bachelor who discovers love, made an international star of Hugh Grant, who won the role after auditioning with a tape from when he was best man at his brother's wedding.

Both those films, plus others like Wedding Crashers, My Big Fat Greek Wedding and Fiddler on the Roof feature wonderful wedding scenes. But what about when nuptials turn nasty?

Who could forget Mr. Robinson howling, "You punk!

You crazy punk! I'll kill you!" at the lovesick Benjamin (Dustin Hoffman) in The Graduate after he interrupted the wedding of Elaine Robinson (Katharine Ross) to another man? Elaine leaves her intended at the altar, running off with Ben to an uncertain future, creating one of the classic endings in movie history.

In Runaway Bride Richard Gere plays a reporter investigating the story of Maggie Carpenter, a serial bride who has had multiple disastrous weddings, leaving three men at the altar. "Always a bride," she says, "never a bridesmaid!"

The biggest bummer wedding in movie history has to be in Kill Bill Vol. 2.

"How it happened, who was there, how many got killed and who killed them, changes depending on who's telling the story," says The Bride (Uma Thurman). "In actual fact, the massacre didn't happen during a wedding at all. It was a wedding rehearsal."

Bynes gets her gym membership revoked for smoking pot

Amanda Bynes' outlandish behaviour reportedly got her kicked out of her New York City gym this weekend when she was caught smoking marijuana in the women's locker room, according to RumorFix.

Management at the Planet Fitness location even went so far as to revoke Bynes' membership.

"Planet Fitness does not allow lunks to work out here, and especially no weed-smokers," a staff member tells the site.

Bynes of course denies the allegations, telling RumorFix, "I don't smoke in the bathroom. I also don't smoke pot, I smoke tobacco."

The Word

I got your nose, Ryan, do you love me now?

Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

Ryan Lochte is having a hard time finding love.

"I haven't been in a relationship in a year," the Olympian and star of the new reality TV show What Would Ryan Lochte Do? tells the new issue of In Touch. "Every time I date someone, I end up getting hurt."

The problem, it seems, is that he doesn't know if women are after his giant brain (this is the man who wore a fake grill on the Olympian podium and coined the catchphrase "Jeah!" so by "giant brain" I might be using slight sarcasm) or for his public persona.

"I don't know if they're just after my fame and money or if they like me for who I really am."

But if he could find someone he really does like, what is he looking for?

"A girl that's fun, classy and sweet who I can have a conversation with," Ryan says.

"If she can make me smile and laugh, I'm sold!"

My advice for his next potential love interest? Pretend to take his nose. He would be so enamored of your magical powers, you'd be unstoppable.

Tara Reid

Reid rep denies drunken dispute

Tara Reid apparently takes her savings seriously, as the American Pie star was reportedly thrown out of an All Saints store in L.A. for throwing a tantrum after being denied a discount, according to the New York Post.

"She was screaming," a source says. "She had to be escorted by security. She seemed drunk."

A rep for Reid challenges that assertion.

"She was definitely not drunk. People love to say Tara's hammered and this and that."

As for why Reid would be so miffed over not getting a discount? "Tara gets a huge discount with All Saints in the U.K. and Paris because she's a walking billboard."

Miley Cyrus and Liam Hemsworth

Can't a girl take off her engagement ring?

Despite indications of trouble between Miley Cyrus and Liam Hemsworth, the pair are "still engaged," according to E! News.

"They live together. The wedding is not off," a source says.

"You can't postpone a wedding that never had a date in the first place. Their plan all along was to wait a couple of years before even thinking about a date."

As for the eyebrows Cyrus has raised by stepping out multiple times without her engagement ring?

"She just doesn't wear it sometimes," the source adds. "People shouldn't read too much into that."

In the land of Disney, the princess always reigned supreme. California Adventures' newest attraction is set in the world of Radiator Springs, where characters from the animated movie motor down Main Street. Rides include Luigi's Flying Tires, a modern floating-on-air version of bumper cars and Mater's Junkyard Jamboree, where tractors whip and spin you around. The highlight is Radiator Spring Racers, which takes you on a leisurely car ride through a wind-carved setting before drag racing your way to the finish line.

Disneyland spots for the boys

Star Tours

Ask a 30- or 40-something father what his favourite movie was growing up — then ask his son the same question — and the likelihood is they may have the same answer: Star Wars. With Disney taking over control of the series, there may be more themed rides in the future. Until then, Star Tours is still the place in Disneyland to enjoy a ride through the galaxy while using the force to avoid the black-gloved wrath of Darth Vader. The 3D ride takes you on a Starspeeder, cruising at light speed through George Lucas' sci-fi universe.

Don't miss: A Jedi Training Academy takes place daily at the Tomorrowland Terrace, where kids are shown how to use lightsabers.

Pirates of the Caribbean

This is one of the original rides at Disneyland — long before Johnny Depp swagged his way through the films as Captain Jack Sparrow. And there's a reason why Pirates has always been popular: it's fun. The boat ride starts in the calm Louisiana Bayou but soon takes you deep into the dark world of hidden treasure, sea battles, and the pirate-terrorized town of Puerto Dorado. It may sound scary, but it has a number of light-hearted moments to tame the pirate terror.

Don't miss: Captain Jack Sparrow makes a number of appearances during the ride, so keep your eyes peeled for him.

Toy Story Midway Mania

Located in California Adventure's Paradise Pier, this 4D ride features spinning vehicles that take you from one screen to another. At each stop you try to hit Toy-Story-related targets that pop up on the screens using everything from eggs to darts to rings and pies. Line ups can be long but are well worth the wait, with Mr. Potato Head greeting visitors and cracking a few jokes.

Don't miss: Tomorrowland's Buzz Lightyear Astro Blasters, where you fire a laser gun at targets while riding through the attraction.

Pirate's Lair on Tom Sawyer's Island

Located in a man-made lake on the edge of Frontierland, the island is a giant playground for kids of all ages. A river raft ferries you from the main park across to the island, where dirt trails lead you to hidden caves, hilltop forts, wood and rope bridges and pirate's treasures.

Don't miss: Take a boat ride around the island on the Mark Twain, a 1900s paddleboat, or aboard the pirate ship Columbia.

George Motz tracks down the best burgers in America in his new Travel Channel series

If you love a good burger, you might think George Motz has the best job ever. He crisscrosses the country as the host of Travel Channel's new series Burger Land, looking for the best burgers in America.

He consumed 70 burgers in the three months it took to shoot the first season, exercising regularly to accommodate his indulgence. Now he's temporarily staying away from burgers to give his system a break.

Still, he said in a recent interview, "I crave a burger every single day."

One thing he stressed, however, is that all burgers are not created equal.

"One of the greatest dividing lines is the frozen patty versus the fresh meat burger," said Motz.

"It is very difficult for restaurants to keep fresh meat in the house, so the restaurants that are making hamburgers with fresh ground beef, it's not easy and they're doing the right thing."

He also says there's a lot of regional variety in burgers. Here are a few of his favourites from different parts of the U.S.

You can use any combo of fish you like in this creamy lasagna, but I like shrimp for its sweet flavour and firm texture. Don't use a fish that's too delicate or it will fall apart.

1. Preheat the oven to 375 F. Spray a 13- by 9-inch baking dish with cooking oil.

2. To make seafood mixture, heat the oil in a non-stick skillet over medium heat. Sauté the garlic, bell pepper and leeks for 5 minutes or just until tender.

3. Add the seafood and sauté until the fish is opaque, approximately 3 minutes. Pour off any excess liquid. Set aside.

4. Combine the flour, stock, milk and mustard in a non-stick saucepan and stir until smooth. Simmer over medium heat until just thickened, approximately 4 minutes, stirring often. Stir in the dill, pepper and the seafood mixture. Remove from the heat.

5. For cheese mix, combine ricotta, 3/4 cup of cheddar, Swiss and Parmesan cheese in a small bowl, mixing well.

6. To assemble, place 3 lasagna noodles in prepared baking dish. Spread 1/3 of seafood mix over top, then 1/2 of cheese mix. Repeat for second layer. Top with remaining 3 lasagna noodles and remaining seafood mix. Sprinkle the remaining 1/4 cup cheddar cheese over the top. Cover with foil and bake approximately 30 minutes, removing the foil for the last 10 minutes of baking time. 2. In a small bowl, lightly beat the eggs. Add a pinch of salt and some pepper to the eggs, then add them to the pan. Tilt the pan to spread the egg all around to make a flat pancake. Cook for 30 to 45 seconds, or until almost set. Turn over the Jobs. What to expect, how to prepare, and how to follow up after your big interview

CASSANDRA JOWETT
TalentEgg.ca

If you really want to impress an insurance employer in a job interview, it all comes down to one thing: always be prepared.

One of the biggest mistakes students and recent graduates make is coming in unprepared, says Trevor Buttrum, Career Connections (careerconnections.info) program manager at the Insurance Institute of Canada. Being unfamiliar with the company, being unable to make connections or draw parallels between your experience and the role, or showing up late are the three biggest insurance industry job interview don'ts, he adds.

Keep reading to find out what to expect during, how to prepare for and how to follow up after your next job interview with an insurance employer:

What to expect

Most interviews for insurance jobs involve a two-step process:

The telephone screen

The process may start with a telephone screen conducted by a recruiter in the company's human resources department. "The telephone screen is designed to confirm that you meet the criteria for the position, establish your understanding of the role, and get a sense of your style or approach," Buttrum explains.

The in-person interview

If you meet the requirements of the telephone screen, it will usually be followed by one or two in-person interviews that may now include the hiring manager and other colleagues involved in the process. "Don't let it throw you if it is a panel interviewing you — these are now common place!" Buttrum says.

The in-person interviews will most likely be behavioural or competency-based, he says. "Think, 'Tell me about a time when...' or scenarios that get at how you might handle various aspects of the job. The employer is looking for you to make connections between what you have done and how it will help you to be successful in your potential new role."

How to prepare

Find out what you'll need

When you're invited for the interview, whether it's by phone or email, always ask if there's anything that you should bring. Here's why:

"I once had an employer say, 'Good thing you asked, I almost forgot to mention that we would like to see an example of a presentation you have developed. Could you supply us with a version on a USB key?'" Buttrum recalls. "I would have never just 'had one on hand' in an interview."

Know yourself

In a job interview situation, knowing exactly how your education and experience will benefit the employer and the role you've applied for is half the battle.

Ideally, you've already determined this in order to tailor your resumé and apply for the job in the first place, but if not, learn as much as you can about the role and map out how you fit the bill, Buttrum says.

Practise your answers to typical job interview questions with a trusted friend or career counsellor and introduce examples from your experience into the conversation. Buttrum recommends using the STAR method to help you answer the interviewer's questions:

- Situation — Setting the stage: Who, when, where, why? (five per cent of your answer).
- Task — What did you do? What was your role? (five per cent of your answer).
- Action — How did you do it? What steps did you take? (70 per cent of your answer).
- Result — What happened? What was the outcome (20 per cent of your answer).

Do your research

How much do you know about the company, its business, core values and any other unique aspects to it?

"Web research, reading trade publications, checking out examples of their consumer marketing and talking to industry professionals are great ways to gain these types of insights," Buttrum explains.

"This information enables you to further tailor your answers to the employer's questions and might help you develop some of your own."

Dress for success

"Insurance is a traditional industry and, although business casual is becoming the norm for day-to-day in the workplace, it is suggested that you go business formal for the interview," Buttrum advises.

What does that mean? "Suit jackets, blazers, pressed pants, blouses, collared shirts, ties, nicely-shined shoes and knee-length skirts are what come to mind," he adds.

How to follow up

Should you or shouldn't you? When and how often? These are all questions that tend to plague students and recent graduates following their job interviews.

"Before you leave the interview, ask what the next steps are in the process and when the employer anticipates moving forward in their decision making," Buttrum recommends. "Keep this date in mind and use it as a temperature gauge for when to follow up next."

From there, don't push too hard. "Like any relationship, high frequency or intensity follow-up can send the wrong message," he says, adding that the process may be taking slightly longer than expected, hiring may not be the person's primary responsibility and other

Think you can just wing it during your next job interview? Think again. iStock Images priorities may have arisen since your interview. "Be sure to give the employer a little leeway."

Frame your follow-up as checking in to see where they are in the process rather than asking whether or not they have reached a decision, and let the employer know you are happy to answer any questions or provide additional information which might support the process, Buttrum advises.

Write the best resumé

Drawing attention.
A few tips on using your resumé to introduce yourself to a potential employer

CASSANDRA JOWETT
TalentEgg.ca

When writing your resumé, what's your ultimate goal? To get a job?

If that's the case, then you probably have the wrong purpose in mind.

Your resumé is just one of many steps you may take toward getting an insurance job. The real goal of that piece of paper should be to get an interview with the employer.

After all, your resumé is simply an opportunity to introduce yourself to a potential employer and, for the first time, draw their attention to your education, qualifications and experience. Your resumé should also demonstrate how you meet the employer's needs and are the best candidate for the specific position that you are applying for.

Follow these tips, provided by Career Connections (careerconnections.info), a division of the Insurance Institute, to avoid any risk of missing out on the next insurance job you apply for.

Before you start

Sure, it's easy to whip up a resumé and fire off a dozen or so job applications each day. You might think that the numbers will be on your side, but the truth is employers notice when you do this. Before applying for any insurance job:

- learn more about the insurance industry.
- research each company and job carefully.
- make connections at insurance industry events and online, and try to set up informational interviews.
- develop a strategy for responding to the needs of the hiring manager.
- create a unique resumé for each job you apply for.

Insurance resumé dos and don'ts

Do

- Keep it concise — no more than one or two pages.
- Make it easy to read — use at least 10 point font.
- Use either a chronological (reverse timeline) or functional (experience-based) format.
- Put your name and contact information front and centre on all pages, including a professional email address (first-name.lastname@mail.com) and phone number with voicemail.
- Include an objective and a professional summary, plus details about your education and work and volunteer history.

Don't:

- Use industry-specific slang, jargon or acronyms if you can avoid it.
- Include references to your age, gender, ethnicity, religion or political affiliation, sexual orientation or Social Insurance Number (SIN).
- Forget to include accomplishments rather than tasks.

LOYAL RELATIONSHIPS

FLEXIBLE PLANS MAKE POINTS PROGRAMS ATTRACTIVE TO CANADIAN CONSUMERS

Canadians truly love loyalty programs. The 2011 Colloquy Loyalty Census revealed 120.7 million loyalty memberships in this country — impressive, given that there are less than 35 million Canadians. Canadian Tire money, a proto-points program conceived by the appropriately named Muriel Billes, has been going strong since 1958.

To what do we owe this loyalty to loyalty? You might argue that Canadians aren't the most rebellious people. You might argue that we love a deal — though many countries have more ferocious bartering cultures than ours. It's probably a bit of both. But what makes loyalty programs most attractive for Canadians is their flexibility.

Choice. Options. Big concepts, expressed in a small, but meaningful way through programs from WestJet, Air Miles, Aeroplan, Shoppers Optimum, PC

Points, and hundreds more from banks, credit card companies and other organizations. Some of these programs let you accumulate points for years, if you wish — saving up for that big-ticket item you have dreamed about. What makes that trip or product so special says a lot about you.

How you earn your points says a lot, too. You do it by being you — by shopping at the places you like to shop, buying the things you like to buy. You can build points by choosing credit, like the Target RBC MasterCard, instead of cash, or by using online retail instead of the traditional kind. Maybe the loyalty program itself is one of the reasons you are shopping there, but these days, almost every vendor has a program of some kind — this is Canada, after all.

Your lifestyle, needs, and personal choices inform how you build points, and how you redeem them.

Aeroplan, for example, allows you to redeem your points not just for plane flights, but other travel-related products and services, such as luggage and car rentals; and even items that have nothing to do with travel, like home furnishings and power tools. You can even donate to charity. While the range of products offered by bookstores, grocery stores or theatres may not be that wide, they are certainly varied enough to suit many tastes.

These are our points — we earned them. And what we do with them is up to us.

— Chris Edwards

WESTJET PROGRAM AS GOOD AS CASH

'DOLLARS' CAN BE SPENT ON FLIGHTS OR VACATIONS

It pays to fly WestJet. Literally.

By enrolling in the WestJet Rewards program, you can earn up to 2.5 per cent in WestJet dollars for every WestJet flight or WestJet Vacations package you enjoy. Then you can use those WestJet dollars to purchase future flights or vacation packages. At WestJet, they are as good as cash.

The program works because it's simple.

"Our currency isn't miles or points," says Robert Palmer, manager, public relations. "If you have 300 WestJet dollars in your rewards account, you have the equivalent of $300 Canadian dollars you can spend with us. No mental gymnastics required."

It's flexible, too. WestJet dollars can be spent on any vacation package or flight the carrier operates, even during seat sales. There are no blackout periods or limited seating. So long as the flight is a new booking, you can use your WestJet dollars to reduce its cost. Like most loyalty programs, WestJet dollars do not cover taxes, fees and charges, but you can use any amount to cover the base fare, starting with as little as 25 WestJet dollars.

As a member of WestJet Rewards, you will earn progressively more WestJet dollars per total spent on WestJet flights in a given year. When your spending reaches certain milestones, WestJet offers bonuses, such as a Jet-Away package, including a companion flight, lounge passes, and more.

You can also build up WestJet dollars by making purchases with one of two WestJet RBC MasterCard. Cardholders earn up to 1.5 per cent back on any purchase they make — unless they are spending on flights or vacation packages with WestJet, in which case they will earn up to two per cent. New applicants receive a welcome bonus of up to 250 WestJet dollars when they make their first purchase with the card. Holders of the WestJet RBC World Elite MasterCard also receive an annual $99 round-trip companion flight (excluding taxes, fees, and charges), which can be used anywhere WestJet flies within Canada or the contiguous United States.

"The program continues to grow and evolve, offering additional value to our guests," Palmer says. "It's not just about loyalty — it's about working to earn your business every day, then rewarding you for being our guest."

LOYALTY HAS ITS REWARDS

DIFFERENT RBC INITIATIVES OFFER A BREADTH OF CHOICE

There once was a time when travel rewards programs were anything but consumer friendly. Fortunately, those days are well behind us.

“With the RBC Rewards program, we put the needs of our customers first,” says Donna Lue-Atkinson, RBC’s vice-president of global loyalty programs and rewards.

“We recognize the value of flexibility and treating every client as a unique individual. We also want the experience to be easy for clients to use and offer them the range of choice they’re looking for in a rewards program.”

To demonstrate this breadth of choice, Lue-Atkinson points to different initiatives within RBC Rewards.

“Some people want a highly personalized travel service. For those clients, we have a strategic relationship with Carson Wagonlit Travel. Our customers visit one of their store locations or call in and get the full-service approach they’re seeking, redeeming their points at point of sale. Other clients prefer self-service, and for those clients, we have a partnership with Travelocity, a one-stop end-to-end online experience. Customers can book their air travel, car rental, cruises, hotels and more online.”

Today’s rewards programs don’t start and end with travel, however.

“In December 2012, RBC Rewards launched eMall on our website to address the growth of online shopping,” Lue-Atkinson says. “Through this portal on our site, consumers can access more than 250 retailers, including Apple, Hudson’s Bay, Indigo Books & Music, Gap and Old Navy. By using their RBC Rewards credit card to make purchases, clients get one extra point for every dollar they spend above and beyond their regular rewards.

“Clients can also redeem points for RBC financial products, converting reward points to top up an RBC RRSP or to pay down an RBC loan or line of credit. It’s another way our customers can use points to extend their purchasing power.”

Washington caps major turnaround

NHL. Capitals win Southeast Division title with victory over Jets; Winnipeg's playoff hopes on life-support

Considering how they started, it's quite the achievement that the Washington Capitals got to the playoffs with time to spare.

The Capitals clinched the Southeast Division title Tuesday night, completing a stark turnaround in a lockout-shortened season with a 5-3 win over the Winnipeg Jets.

The Capitals blew a two-goal lead, survived a pair of replay reviews and exhaled deeply when defencemen John Erskine cleared two shots off the goal-line. They also had to kill off a power play with a one-goal lead late in the game, but they held on to win for the 10th time in 11 games and secure a post-season berth with two games remaining.

Alex Ovechkin scored his league-leading 31st goal — an empty-netter in the final minute — and Matt Hendricks, Jason Chimera, Nicklas Backstrom and Mathieu Perreault also scored, while Braden Holtby made 24 saves. The Capitals were next-to-last in the Eastern Conference as recently as March 21, but Ovechkin and first-year coach Adam Oates have led them to the playoffs for the sixth consecutive season, a run that includes five Southeast titles.

As the winner of the division — albeit the weakest division in the NHL — Washington will leapfrog several teams with better records and enter the playoffs as the conference's No. 3 seed.

The loss keeps the Jets in ninth place in the East, one spot away from the playoffs but with slim chances of moving up because they have only one game remaining. The Ottawa Senators, in eighth place at the start of Tuesday's play, have three games left.

Evander Kane, Blake Wheeler and Nik Antropov scored for the Jets.

Security beefed up for draft in NYC

The NFL is increasing security for this week's draft at Radio City Music Hall, with everyone subject to screenings, including use of metal detectors and pat-downs, and searches of personal property.

Even league officials, players and their families will be subject to such measures.

The league said Tuesday that spectators who don't consent to the security requirements will be refused admission. The draft begins Thursday night and has sessions Friday night and Saturday afternoon.

Stadium delays cost Bombers over $700K

Winnipeg Blue Bombers' Steve Morley, left, and Kenny Mainor wave goodbye to the fans after the last game at Canad Inns Stadium on Nov. 3. THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

Even a $758,307 loss posted by the Blue Bombers last year couldn't keep Garth Buchko from being an optimist.

The team's president and chief executive officer announced Tuesday the CFL club had an overall operating profit of $726,930 last year wiped out mainly because of delays in building the new $200-million Investors Group Field.

Windy and frigid weather were factors in stadium development costs unexpectedly adding a $1.05-million bill,

Hoping for better days

Last year's loss was a sharp turnabout from the 2011 financial report, which saw the Bombers take in $3.01 million in net earnings from operations and an overall net profit of $2.3 million.

- Team president Garth Buchko is hoping the Bombers can improve on 2012's 6-12 record because if they don't, it could cost the club in the pocketbook again.

while the team also took a $434,287 hit for writing down Canad Inns Stadium assets that couldn't be taken to the new 33,500-seat facility on the University of Manitoba campus.

"Looking back at 2012, it is easy to identify the disappointments we experienced," Buchko said.

"However, at the risk of being called an optimist, which I certainly am, you can't build a world-class facility and team by focusing on the past."

Buchko, who was criticized last year for announcing opening dates for the new stadium then having to cancel games at the new facility all together in June, said its doors will open next month.

JUSTIN PRITCHARD

When Audi's mid-engine R8 performance car hit the road in 2009, it was pasted in poster form onto the bedroom walls of drooling teenaged car-buffs around the globe while earning a reputation for being an extreme performance machine with incredible driving dynamics and every-day usability.

Feature content included navigation, a Bang and Olufsen stereo system, Bluetooth, MMI Interface, driver computer, heated leather and plenty more. A backup camera with distance sensors was available, too. All models are two-seaters with a trunk in the front and a V8 or V10 engine in the middle.

tronics twice — paying attention to the MMI system and ensuring it activates, boots up and manipulates various functions properly. Ensure no "check engine" or "service vehicle" notifications are present in the instrument cluster. Shift the manual transmission quickly, ensuring the clutch "bites" hard, and works without slippage. Some owners report electronic dialing-back of engine power when shifting quickly if the clutch is slipping, which is intended to increase durability. Finally, inspect the R8's paint for signs of blotchiness.

Common Issues

Start your visit with a used R8 candidate by inspecting the vehicle's tires and brakes. Ensure the seller isn't passing off a set of rubber or brake pads and rotors that are in need of replacement. A tire tread-depth gauge can help. Squealing brakes are a sign of wear and a mechanical inspection at an Audi dealer should be considered mandatory.

Engine

This range-topping Audi got Quattro AWD teamed to a 4.2 litre, 420-horsepower V8 and a six-speed manual transmission as standard kit. Shoppers could opt for an up-level V10 engine, which bumped displacement to 5.2 litres and horsepower to 525. An "R-Tronic" auto-clutch gearbox was available on both models.

What owners like Owners love the exclusivity, style, performance and bragging-rights that come as part of the R8's package. Ease of entry and exit and an everyday-comfortable ride are noted.

What owners dislike

Limited cargo storage and a sometimes-fussy MMI interface are among the most common owner complaints.

Verdict

Reliability information is largely inconclusive on used R8 models in the first half of this generation — though they are a hot item in the used market nonetheless. Opt for a model with as much of its factory warranty remaining as possible to be safe. Extended warranty, if available, may protect against high repair bills down the line, too.

Time to fix your bad car-care habits

Five useful tips.

Follow these pieces of advice to improve the longevity of your vehicle and save cash

Breaking bad habits can be hard, especially if you don't even know you have one. It's the same when it comes to car care.

Many of us aren't aware when we commit a car-care faux pas which could affect the look and longevity of our vehicle. Autoglym, a company specializing in car care products, offers the following advice to correct some common bad habits:

1. Clean your car consistently throughout the year.

Create a routine and set a specific day to wash your vehicle. Washing your car at least once or twice a month is recommended to maintain a superior finish.

2. Don't skip the polish and wax.

If you fail to polish and wax your car every few months, opting only to wash it, you're only doing half the job — so make sure you do it right. Combining the polishing and waxing steps every few months are essential for your car's care. Polishing is an important step to repair and revive your car's shine, while waxing protects your car's paintwork against environmental factors and weather conditions. A quick way to maintain your wax on the go is to apply Autoglym's Aqua Wax. With this, there's no need to dry your car after washing, saving you time and effort.

3. Make sure to clean your tires.

Cleaning your wheels is a quick and easy way to improve the overall look of your car. Not only does it make them look great, but regular cleaning prevents the build-up of brake dust, which if left will become difficult to remove. Don't neglect your tires either — a high quality dressing will refresh old rubber, leaving it like new.

4. A little elbow grease in the undercarriage goes a long way

It's not just about the paint — clean the undercarriage of your car frequently. If you don't, rusting won't be your only problem, as the metal in your frame can become brittle and lead to an expensive bill on your next safety inspection.

5. Deal with the problem spots immediately

Don't leave cleaning bird droppings and dirt until later, as these problem spots will become harder to remove the longer you leave them on your car. Tree sap is particularly damaging, as it dries very hard and attaches itself to your car with a tar-like bond.

Designers to China: You have our attention

Autopilot. The huge Chinese vehicle market will, inevitably, influence what ends up on our roads

AUTO PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

The Shanghai motor show on this week further confirms the importance of the Chinese market to today's global auto-makers.

They showed up in droves bearing metaphorical boxes of chocolates and actual concepts and production cars. And why wouldn't they?

Good to be big

China is by far the single largest vehicle market in the world — selling more than 20 million units a year. The next biggest market, the U.S., is about 15 million. GM sells more vehicles in China (about 2.8 million) than it does in America.

Size is just one thing. Potential is another. In the U.S. there

The Nissan Friend-ME debuted at this week's Shanghai auto show to possibly woo the world's largest cohort — the 240 million (mostly male) Chinese born in the 1980s, known as the "Balinghou." HANDOUT are currently 800 cars for every 1,000 people. That's one saturated market. In China, it's currently about 50 to 80 vehicles per every 1,000 people. That's upside with hot sauce. In five years China's annual market is expected to top 35 million units.

It's a free for all

And what's making auto-makers even more crazy about

China is that the market is still up for grabs. No dominant player. Lots of domestic and foreign players investing in production and retail facilities. Lots of current and future segment races to be won and lost.

Driving the design bus

Net result: A massive amount of intellectual and monetary design capital is being focused on China at the moment, and that will reverberate across all global markets.

This is not to say that the Chinese market will darken the design light in other markets, only that what's going on in China will surely influence global design trends. There's no way it can't.

At the very least, we here in the North American market get to "yea or nay" automotive designs that are already fleshed out and/or contemplated for China.

Take for example the Nissan Friend-ME concept, which had its world debut at Shanghai. Nissan says it has been expressly designed to appeal to the world's largest single market demographic — the approximately 240 million Chinese born in the 1980s, tagged as the "Balinghou."

Because of China's "one child" policy, the majority of the Balinghou demographic are males without siblings. They are in their mid-20s now and ready to buy. (They might be somewhat over parented too, but let's not go there today.)

"Clearly, their tastes will shape automotive trends worldwide for decades to come," said Nissan's product strategy chief, Francois Bancon, in a press release.

Because they grew up without siblings, and leisure time with peers is treasured, Nissan figured the Friend-ME could give these Balinghou males a private-yet-connected space to hang out with peers, and a "balanced" design that allows them to "stand out" and "fit in" at the same time. And speaking to China's growing urbanity, another aim of the design is to be a "confident creature of the night, meant to be seen in bright city lights."

I don't know how much you, or I, have in common with a 20-something male in China, who has no siblings but loads of personal and familial expectations, but if you watch automotive design over the next few years, we might find out.

Complex car components can be costly

Driving force. Auto parts: The more they make, the less they cost

JIL
drive@metronews.ca

A car may be expensive to buy, but it's also expensive to build. In addition to the cost of raw materials, plant overhead and labour, auto-makers also have to consider the design and development of each component.

"Before we stamp out the first part, there are significant costs associated with design, product validation, capital equipment and tooling that must be paid for up front, or agreed to be amortized across the production run," says Patrick Kinsie, executive director of global business development for Multimatic Inc., which makes various parts for several auto companies.

While simple parts will have relatively smaller start-up costs, the price for complex ones can be astronomical. Developing a completely new engine or transmission can be as much as $500 million to $1 billion.

Car companies spread these enormous costs over volume production, including numerous variants. An engine design may stick around for some 15 years, with engineers creating new or differently-sized engines based on its architecture. There will still be considerable cost involved for these, but it will be much less than starting from scratch.

Vehicle platforms are designed so they can be used to create several new models with common components, spreading the initial cost and recouping it as soon as possible.

Depending on the part, automakers may produce it in-house or work with independent suppliers. There are many ways these companies work together, including the car manufacturer handing over a production-ready design for the supplier to build, or providing the size and performance requirements and having the supplier design and develop it, known in the trade as full black-box design.

New designs are initially made into prototypes to make sure they'll work properly, and if they're structural, they will need to be crash-tested. Once the parts are validated, expensive dies are made to stamp them out in large quantities.

"There are companies that run profits making a handful of hand-built engines, but they charge a much higher price for

Methods used

Automakers often use generic parts from suppliers for much of their hardware, such as window motors or trunk hinges, but use proprietary parts for differentiation in powertrain and design.

• Working together. Some car companies work jointly on major projects, such as the "world engines" designed by Chrysler, Hyundai and Mitsubishi, spreading the cost of the basic architecture.

• Standards. Global vehicles sold in Canada must meet federal requirements, including safety standards, metric instruments and bilingual labels and manuals, which add to their cost.

them," Kinsie says. "In a mainstream vehicle, the automaker will want to make it in the millions to get that unit amortization down to a reasonable level."
